Credit Rating Bureau Aids Citizen Who Pays Debts but Steps Hard on Bill Dodger and "Gyp" Game Artist

160 Members Here Have Access to Credit Records of About 45,000 Persons

Only Two Per Cent of People Deliberately Try To Evade Debt, Records Show

A credit rating bureau, like the police department, is visualized by the majority of people as something that [illegible] people as a result of [illegible] Persons having [illegible] are not [illegible] to do with either of these and the service is of value in many ways this one.

Many think the small interest in a subscription, Herbert E. Fields, head of the Marion Credit Rating Bureau says. This is entirely wrong. In addition, posting to any number of [illegible] are also [illegible] and [illegible] the [illegible] a policy.

The good credit risk is a responsible one in the life of nearly every person. Very few pass through life [illegible] without the use of credit, and for that reason, it must be built well and maintained.

A casual glance at dues and you can get a "ticket" to get away with purchases without paying for it somewhere. The merchant, if a member of the bureau, can quickly step to the phone and learn what sources others have had in extending credit to this particular person. The value of such a service is evident.

No Reason for Fear

Those who are prompt to pay and who do not deliberately avoid payment of bills should be able to favorable rating of the retail credit bureau. A treasure, but woe betide the individual who has tried every method but paying to "get by" his bills.

There are 100 members of the local bureau. These members have ready access to information on approximately 45,000 persons living in and near Marion. In fact nearly everyone who has opened an account in local stores. Each day a representative of the bureau collects a list of the accounts opened and closed, and these are filed on small cards, which when filled out, usually trace the customer part way up the family tree. The cards fairly drip with information about the customers, but in addition to the usual charges, as it is written in code. Thus do the proper parties get the desired information and a person's financial standing occupies prominence in discussion.

Record Is Detailed

When, where, how much and when paid is recorded. We see on the card that on a certain date, a party has been sued in municipal court for a grocery bill. A week later the meat market falls in line for a sizeable account. Then he incurs a bad check. He attempts to charge an expensive item in an out-of-town store. The merchant calls the bureau only to find his credit has been sadly abused, and must not be extended him.

That's all very well, says Mr. Average Person, but where do I benefit by such a scheme? Mr. Fields can easily answer that question.

For instance, a couple is married, and after a few months, or perhaps years, of matrimonial strife, cease to live together. No divorce is secured, and the husband is legally responsible for the debts of his wife unless he advertises and notifies the credit bureau that he "will not be responsible for debts" contracted by his wife. The bureau, in a bulletin issued twice each month, notifies merchants of action taken by the husband in regard to his spouse's accounts. Accordingly they refuse to extend her credit with the view of collecting from him. Thus the husband and the merchant are protected from "bad bills."

High Honesty Percentage

Statistics estimate that 95 per cent of the people are honest, Mr. Fields says. Practically all of this number manage in some way to meet their obligations, and are rewarded with credit when they are really in need of it as well as when used for convenience. About three per cent of the people are simply unable to pay their debts, and slowly sink to the place where they can no longer get credit. This group would pay if they had the money, but have met with adverse conditions and are constantly "broke."

The remaining "two per cent," an appellation that is well understood where credit business is done, cause more trouble than the remaining 98 per cent, and give credit rating bureaus more to worry about than all the rest of their jobs combined. They are of the type that deliberately attempt to "gyp" the merchant; they run large accounts and then "skip."

The majority of this group do not lack finances, but they attempt to live beyond their means. Their bills run into large figures before their credit is slowly used up. When this happens, they leave for "parts unknown." This ruse is never a success. Sooner or later their client's leaks out, and they are obliged to make payments on their old bills until these are satisfied. Credit bureaus all over the country have established "two percenters" in every nook and corner of the world to satisfy accounts.

Example of Credit Service

Probably one of the most unusual circumstances ever confronted by the local bureau occurred about two years ago. A man of 35 years, with a family of five children, was earning slightly over $20 a week in a local factory. He had formerly been bankrupt, and had evidently never recovered. A death and sickness in the family caused him to sink even lower in credit circles until creditors began to threaten to take what property he had, which would have done but little towards satisfying his debts. Here the bureau devised a scheme to aid both the unfortunate man and the merchants.

All accounts against him, totalling more than $200, were combined, and he was asked to pay 20 per cent of his wages, or $4 a week. This pitiful sum was divided among the creditors each week, but soon the payments became irregular, and then ceased. Had the circumstances permitted, the man would have eventually cleared his credit, but instead, he left Marion.

There are numerous instances where several accounts against an individual are totalled and weekly payments made on them through the bureau. This arrangement is beneficial to both the creditor and the consumer.

The bi-weekly bulletin issued by the local bureau contains a list of all deeds, mortgages, marital [illegible] marriages and divorces, a list of [illegible] bonds who refuse to honor their wife's orders, and other information that could possibly be of service to the subscribers. Information from the local bureau is not confined to Marion. It reaches over the entire country through the aegis of the National Retail Credit Association, of which it is a member. Through this connection, ratings of persons in nearly every city can be had within a few hours' time.

The Marion Credit Rating Bureau was established here in 1916. It has steadily grown to its present membership, which is a very satisfactory one for a city of this size. Kenneth E. Fields is manager of the bureau and handles the work with the assistance of Miss Gertrude Tumblinson and Miss Roberta Kinsler.

On the Streets of Marion

WITH THE STAR STAFF

Never Too Young

VANITY by cause is wonderful. Verily were those words spoken, and more true are they today than for many months back.

The other day a little girl, a cute little package of personality with a frost of shining red hair, sat on the steps of her mother's home and with a powder puff with the dexterity that comes of years of practice.

When she saw that she was the object of several beaming smiles displayed by bystanders, she used the puff like a Japanese fan, to roll her eyes to the customers on the sidewalk.

Bugs No Obstacle

If the Fourth dawns bright and clear there will be more sandwiches shoved per mile and more gallons of potato salad put up in quart jars than on any other day of the year.

The national holiday draws more people to the countryside, the lakes and the creeks than any other "off" day for workers. The first thing that enters the mind of a working man or woman when the[illegible] of a holiday [illegible] is food. [illegible] basket to form it to pack a lunch and go some place away from home and eat it.

There has always been an argument from people inclined to take their meals at home or hotels on why people want the discomforts of swallowing bugs with the salad and watching small pesty animals climb over the contents of sandwiches and cake, when a hotel clerk or home will offer food clean and hot.

But no matter what the argument people still love to pack a lunch and go off somewhere and eat it. More power to 'em!

Embarrassing Moment

THIS thing of being taken for another person is slightly embarrassing for both parties—the arrester and the arrested.

A girl who recently returned after an absence from the city, walked into an uptown store, flung out her arms and ran to a girl with exclamations of greeting.

No response came. The girl who was sitting sideways, paid no attention. The cordial greeter walked around to face this girl and why wasn't pleased to see her, and found she was a total stranger.

Apologies were forthcoming and everything was settled. Undoubtedly that girl wasn't pleased to be taken for the friend of the moment, and perhaps the girl who received here the object of the attention greeting isn't pleased at the result, too.

Firecrackers Used to Blow Up Mail Boxes; Receptacles Then Replaced

McCONNELSVILLE July 3 — Morgan county folks are bewildered today by a series of 'strange happenings' in connection with a pre-celebration of Fourth of July.

Never before in history have their mail boxes been blown almost to atoms, by firecrackers, and still less frequently have such demolished boxes been replaced.

But such things have happened this year as farmers living on route 37, south of McConnelsville will testify.

Authorities are on the trail of the men said to be from Marietta, who, it is rumored attacked their car at mail boxes in this rural district and deposited a five inch firecracker in each of them.

Purchase New Boxes

Seven of the tin receptacles on the west side of the Muskingum river near Jootown were completely demolished. Nine others on the road south of the city suffered a similar fate.

Many others in nothing yet attempted to have such damage repaired by the various crackers according to reports reaching postal authorities here.

A strange feature was added to the acts of vandalism in view of the desperate efforts by reporters for their murders went to the expense of purchasing new boxes and rolling them up the night after the bombs were planted. Many remained unpaired however but perhaps tonight will see further replacements.

Hate License Number

Postal authorities at Zanesville have been apprised of the goings on and have expressed their intentions of prosecuting the guilty parties.

The license number of the car allegedly used in the pranks is in the possession of police here and arrests will follow it is said. The license number was said to have been noted at Marietta.

Although the mail boxes are privately owned they are protected by Uncle Sam.

Perhaps the pranksters didn't realize that they were failing with the government when they started their pre-fourth celebrations.

Police are also trying to locate the store, where a number of new mail boxes were recently purchased.

Soap, water and polish make it look better

Use plenty of soap and water and polish if you want to keep your car looking its best. And if you want to keep it running its best, use good oil and plenty of it.

NEW OIL ...free from harmful wax helps it run better

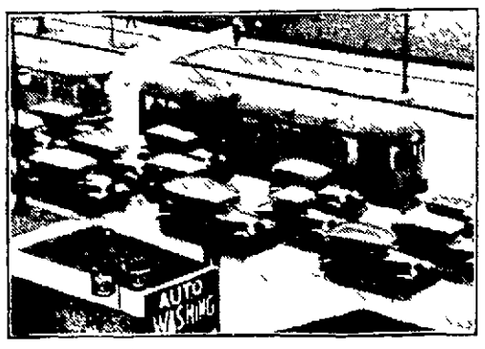
New Sohio Motor Oil is sold everywhere in Ohio, at 700 Red-White-and-Blue Standard service stations and by thousands of dealers everywhere, in city, town and country.

Traffic conditions promote carbon formation. Quick starting and stopping and an idling motor soon choke small, high compression combustion chambers with carbon. Use the oil that's free from harmful, carbon forming wax—for smoother miles.



IT'S astonishing what a little soap, water, polish and an hour or so of hard work will do for a car's appearance. No more astonishing than the improved operation apparent when you have your crank-case drained and refilled with New Sohio Oil—free from harmful wax.

Is it any wonder? New Sohio Motor Oil is all lubricant—free from harmful, carbon forming wax; free from the harmful wax that prevents smooth, even flow and perfect piston seal; free from the harmful wax that thins out in heat and gums up in cold.

Try New Sohio Motor Oil today. Insist on the oil that's free from harmful wax. It helps your car run better.

ADVANCED NEW PROCESS REMOVES HARMFUL WAX AT 40° BELOW ZERO

Most manufacturers of good oils now de-wax by centrifugal action, using the principle of the farm cream separator. But the method used in making Sohio Motor Oil performs this vital operation at 40° below zero. The harmful wax is thus completely crystallized and thrown out; what remains is all-lubricant 100% Paraffin base oil—New Sohio Motor Oil. Expect these results:

1. Little or no carbon
2. Flexible viscosity—perfect lubrication at all temperatures
3. Perfect piston seal—full power, least danger of oil dilution.

do you shout the name of your car or whisper it ?

DeSoto

When you have finished discussing politics and the home team's batting slump and the conversation turns to automobiles, you naturally would rather be an orator than an auditor. And when you are asked the name of your car, you want to shout it, not whisper it.

The driver of a Chrysler built De Soto Six is proud to talk about his car in any company, for its name is accepted as a badge of real quality. Although De Soto Six sells for as low as $845, the price needs no apology from the owner. He found that he did not have to go higher to purchase complete motoring satisfaction.

Above all else, De Soto gives a real foundation for pride of ownership. This pride must be based on something more than mere transportation, nowadays. It can be inspired only by a car that conforms to every high standard of performance, appearance, comfort, durability and safety.

People take it for granted that an automobile will get you there and back, that it started in life with a presentable coat of paint and that it has its quota of gimcracks and knick-knacks. The test of its value is how much it exceeds these minimum requirements. The stricter the test, the more evident is De Soto's superiority.

Ask for a demonstration and learn for yourself why De Soto Six owners like to "talk automobile."

Camp Robert Uhler Opens Second Period With Record Enrollment; Awards Made

Sixty-Three Now Enjoying Outing at Y. M. C. A. Camp: Joseph Holt Receives Pennant as Best All-Around Camper in First Period

Sixty-three campers, the largest enrollment for a single period in the history of Camp Robert Uhler, of the Marion Y. M. C. A., are now at the camp located near Hepburn for a two week's outing.

This period, which is the second of the year, is for boys in the Friendly Indian class or from nine and one-half to 12 years of age. The first period, which attracted about 45 campers, was for boys of all ages.

The enrollment of actual campers for this period beats by one the record set by the girls' period last summer. However, the record for total number of persons in the camp still belongs to last year's girls' period, when approximately 70 were present this number including campers and leaders. Three leaders in addition to F. O. Rudolph, camp director, are now employed at the camp. These three leaders are three college students, Charles Evans, of Marion, a student at Wittenberg, Elbert Schory, a student at Heidelberg and Findley Herring, of Ohio Northern.

Those Now in Camp

The list of campers at the camp for the present period is as follows: Robert Altenberger, George Altenberger, Milton Birnbaum, Richard Berry, Harold Callahan, Richard Crow, Alfred Exton, Charles Fairbanks, Robert Fritz, Don Flach, Jack Foreman, Jack Gilmise, Francis Grundy, Mahlon Gast, Alfred Gardiner, Frederick Gelbaugh

Bars Murder Encores.

Contrary to the views and arguments of the opponents of capital punishment, Colonel Henry Barrett Chamberlin, director of the Chicago crime commission, sees a close connection between the failure of juries to inflict the death penalty and an increase in murders in Chicago and Cook county.

Presenting statistics of the commission showing 173 murders in the city and county during the first six months of the present year, Colonel Chamberlin said:

"The homicide record for the six months is about at par. Away back in 1910, there were 170 murders during the first six months of the year. Then Chicago suddenly woke up and juries started inflicting the death penalty. During the next two years, 1920 and '21, there were respectively eighty and eighty-seven killings.

"During 1920 and '21 eighteen men were hanged in the county jail for murder. That tells the story."

Then juries evaded verdicts which would force the death penalty. The practice of sentencing convicted murderers for life or ten or twenty years became common, with the result that those committed under such sentences served a few years and were pardoned or paroled. In 1922 the murder record for the first six months was 120. In 1923 for the same period it was 122. In 1924 it went to 175 for the first half of the year and for the first six months of 1925 it increased to 196. It fell to 182 in 1926 for the same period and in both 1927 and 1928 it was 193 for the half-year.

In a word, since the practical cessation of the death penalty in Chicago and Cook county, the murder record has been well over twice as high as it was during either of the two years marked by occasional legal executions.

The opponents of capital punishment are long on theory and strong in the expression that its infliction not only does not prevent, but actually increases, crime, but the cold facts and figures proffered by the Chicago crime commission utterly refute alike their views and theories.

And there is always this absolute certainty, the murderer who is executed for his crime does not commit another murder, as a number of Chicago murderers who has been sentenced to prison and released have in the past few years. Capital punishment is an absolute preventive of murder encores.

Too Many Bus Accidents.

Newspaper readers must have become impressed by the thought that there are far too many bus accidents. Almost daily they have read of such accidents with attendant decline on injuries. They have been out of all proportion to what should have been expected with the careful handling of such conveyances, and one is bound to wonder if it is not about time that some restraint be placed on bus operation.

Monday, we read, a Canton woman was killed and six other persons were injured when a Canton-Akron bus skidded at North Canton as the driver attempted to avoid another car and ran into a pickup into some nearby fruit trees and was rendered to the road.

Saturday twenty-two passengers were injured when the driver of a Pittsburgh-Lisbon bus attempted to pass another car while going at a high rate of speed near Boardman and the bus skidded and overturned.

And so the story goes. We do not pretend to be able to enumerate all the recent accidents of the kind, yet a few of them stand out as especially disturbing ones. There was the one at St. Paul in which several persons were killed, and about the same time near the south side of Pittsburgh, when a bus driver, in attempting to pass an automobile lost control and went into a deep ditch. It was not long since the horror near Bellaire, where a bus was hit by an electric car with a resultant loss of numerous life a score of human lives.

The engineer of a passenger train usually has to serve time hauling freight locomotives before the transporting of precious human cargo is committed to his care, and he is not put in charge of a freight engine until he has served three years as a fireman. Thus the average engineer serves a long apprenticeship before handling passenger engines. And he drives an engine traveling on rails and chugs through a fenced in right-of-way.

Yet the handling of many buses operated for the carrying of passengers at a like rate of speed on the public highways is sometimes committed to drivers whose experience in handling vehicles of such size and power may be limited.

We do not mean to hold that the drivers involved in the accidents to which we have referred were inexperienced. As a matter of fact, the majority of them were reported to have been experienced men. But assuming that all of them were experienced drivers, there is all the more reason why bus drivers should be put through a period of training that it may be learned whether or no they are careful men as well as men skilled by experience in the handling of machines. If such accidents as those to which reference has been made occur to experienced drivers, it goes to show that there must be something beyond mere experience in handling motor cars to work for safety in the handling of buses. And if such accidents occur to men experienced in the handling of cars, what may we not expect to result from this handling of cars by men of less experience who may not be impressed by the fact that there is need for the greatest care in operating them at any and all times?

Does not the multiplicity of bus accidents show that there is need that such vehicles be committed for operation to men not only skilled in driving, but also shown by experience to be men as careful as they are skilful?

It is revealed that the rescue of the four Spanish fliers was an accident, the plane sent out by the Eagle having abandoned hope and being enroute to the carrier when the quartet was discovered. It's pretty safe to guess, however, that the rescue was none the less pleasing to Major Franco and his companions accident though it may have been.

Not content with the fact that a Britisher holds the world automobile record of 231 miles an hour, another Briton is constructing a $125,000 machine of 1,000 horsepower, designed to travel 300 miles an hour. But will not such a vehicle come under the head of a flivver machine?

There's a plan afoot in Chicago to kill the city's jaywalking ordinance for the alleged reason that nobody up there wants it. From the fact that 392 persons were killed in Windy City traffic accidents the first six months of the present year it's pretty evident that mighty few obey it.

The new small currency isn't to be put into general use until the 10th of the present month. If the delay in issuing it has done nothing else, it has kept the dirty old-style bills in circulation sufficiently long to establish the fact that there is hardly so much in the germ theory as commonly imagined.

T. H. Zable, the Danish minister of justice will spend his summer vacation in Sing Sing. That's not exactly what one would call an ideal way of putting in a vacation period, but even at that he may be far more comfortable and return to Denmark in far better shape than he would had he put in the time at some of our summer resorts.

The Paris police have made a clean-up of doctors over there who have been keeping wounds open by surgery that factory workers could collect not only their pay as such but also insurance compensation, one doctor being sentenced to two years in prison and barred from practice for ten years and other offenders receiving somewhat lighter sentences. We very gravely fear that surgical ethics are not quite so high over there as they might be.

Representative George H. Tinkham, of Massachusetts, wants the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal church prosecuted for failure to make returns of its election expenses for the years 1925 to 1928, inclusive, under the corrupt practices act. Can it be that the Hon. George, regardless of the disclaimers of its officials still suspects that the board is a political organization?

Editorial Opinion.

MALARIA CAUSED ROME'S FALL.

England has awakened to realize one of the fact that one of the most causes of the fall of the Roman empire was malaria and the weakening [illegible] carriers [illegible] of the mosquito were there. These [illegible] were unknown. The real enemy and final destroyer of the most [illegible] of early power was the invisible malaria mosquito, which not only [illegible] but [illegible] at a low rate of vitality and efficiency, and [illegible] disease. Rome's [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] protection.

The [illegible] of many [illegible] [illegible] and Leghorn prove that the empire must have [illegible] to combat the menace of the [illegible] [illegible]

These [illegible] show that two-thirds of Corsica is [illegible] and uninhabitable mainly by [illegible] of malaria. According to the Manchester Guardian, [illegible] in Central Italy [illegible] towns are reduced to the status of [illegible] villages, and [illegible] malarious have at their sole inhabitants the wild pig and leopard. In one town, according to the [illegible] Italian Law in a few years reduced the population from 5,000 to 2,000!

Of course the chief remedy is an [illegible] one. American scientists have shown what may be done in this respect. The names of Gorgas and Wood and Noguchi will live forever. But more [illegible] to be done. There still remain vast tracts in the United States which endure [illegible] the menace of the malaria germ. There will be redeemed, as all of England's [illegible] will be redeemed. But the facts are [illegible] show that there are other [illegible] than war which need the concentrated [illegible] of the race of humankind. From a purely [illegible] point of view, the effects of [illegible] are prodigious. The world, including the United States, must fight [illegible] We need new and numerous laboratories and armies of trained men and women to [illegible] the mosquito and the disease represented [illegible] the destroyer of empires.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

DON'T PLUCK FLOWERS THERE.

You [illegible] will save money and escape annoyance if [illegible] motoring with flowers when traveling through West Virginia. That state has a new law [illegible] by nature lovers. It prohibits the plucking of wild bloom along the highways and within 100 feet of the highways, without the written consent of the owners of the property. Violation of the law, or the transportation of wild bloom or shrubs, is punishable by a fine of $100. Instructions have been given state troopers and police officials to enforce the law vigorously.

This looks like a law camouflaged with a good purpose and intended to produce revenue. The right of the state to protect the wild flowers is unquestioned and all sane efforts in enforcing that right are to be commended. The ruthless [illegible] shown by the flower butchers each season is aggravating and deserves sound rebuke. But the $100 fine is ridiculous. It looks like a trap, set for the unfortunate tourist, and, if that is the case, the state is in little business in seeking to prey on the purses of its visitors. The law, as it stands today, is the product of poor thinking, or the result of sordid commercialism. One is indefensible, the other indecent.

One state not far from West Virginia passed a law a few years ago providing a fine of $10 for any driver or passenger who passed over a railway grade crossing without coming to a full stop. It was proposed as a safety measure. It was, in fact, a raid on tourists. Roadside courts were in operation, deputy constables were near the principal grade crossings, arrests were numerous, fines abundant, revenues were replenished, the raid was a great success for a time. It is such unwise laws and burdensome fines that help make the administration of justice appear contemptible. But, so long as that law is in force, let the tourists through West Virginia have a care.—Ohio State Journal.

C. E. Jacobs had the fingers of his left hand crushed at the plant of the Marion Steam Shovel company.

The Marion Steam Shovel company let a contract to the McClintic-Marshall Construction company, of Pittsburgh, for a new boiler plant.

Mrs. N. L. Gebhart gave a "Patriotic" breakfast at her home on east Church street in honor of Mrs. Arthur W. Sidell, of Cleveland.

Marion scored a run off Stoup and shut out Newark. Only four hits were made off Lewis.

Gibraltar, the City.

BY TEMPLE MANNING.

It is doubtful whether the Moorish Spanish and white-haired proprietors of Gibraltar ever heard of P. T. Barnum, America's greatest circus man, and the famous saying that "there is born every minute." But [illegible] on the wide range in prices for certain articles to certain customers, it is a certainty that one of the same opinion.

At the entrance of the wharf at which the steamer lands, are [illegible] the Moorish and Spanish markets. No announcement was made at the commissioners office this morning to the effect that a definite decision would be made this afternoon on whether or not the county will authorize an additional appropriation of $500 to complete the testing for tuberculosis in Crawford county cattle. A hearing between two of the commissioners state and federal representatives and private interests was held at the office of the commissioners Monday at which time decision in the matter was delayed for a few days.

A severe blow will be suffered by the Ohio Farm Cooperative Dairy which has recently built a complete new modern plant in Bucyrus if a decision is made against carrying on the work in the county. A great amount of the milk passing through the local Ohio Farmers dairy plant is shipped to the Cleveland market where an ordinance prohibits the sale of milk in that city not secured from tuberculin tested herds.

Testing of herd cattle was started in August 1927. Since that time a total of 17,997 head of cattle has been tested involving an expenditure of $9,015.50. All of 170 herds have not been tested of which some are reasons no cattle belonging to farmers were declared to have them tested when the work first started. Out of the 17,997 heads tested less than 500 were found to be infected. All of those were killed under federal inspection.

"My! you look lovely to-night"

SHE knew the compliment to be true—for the last pimple had vanished.

If you are one of the embarrassed—and men are not exceptions—with skin blemishes that linger, and sometimes leave scars, you must realize that the logical cause may come from the blood.

A clear, smooth, velvety skin bespeaks loveliness. Men admire it. Women praise and secretly envy. Hope, joy, happiness, and even love, may depend on the possession of a clear, unblemished skin.

On the other hand—skin eruptions are outward evidences of the condition within. Authorities state it is an indication that the body's power of resistance to disease and infection is low. Meaning, that there is a deficiency of red-blood-cells.

Without plenty of rich, red blood, there could be no strong, sturdy, powerful men, or beautiful, healthy women.

When you get your red-blood-cells back to normal, that sluggish let-down feeling, loss of appetite, boils, pimples, and skin troubles disappear. You get hungry again and you sleep soundly; firm flesh takes the place of that which was once flabby. You feel strong. Your nerves become steady. You are resistant to diseases.

S.S.S. is Nature's own tonic for improving the appetite, building strength, and clearing the body of so-called skin troubles, by increasing the red-cells of the blood.

S.S.S. is made from fresh vegetable drugs and has stood the test of over 100 years.

All Drug Stores sell S.S.S. in two sizes. Ask for the larger size. It is more economical.

means to secure her freedom without more delay.

Unfair though it might be to the still too possibly existing husband's such action as she might feel herself constrained to take, she could no longer let scruples delay her marrying Lance. Much more of this strain would drive her mad.

When at length it was time to go she hardly knew the bitterness which Mae had alleged of the temperature, but felt it rather as something soothing to cheeks that burned with more than normal heat.

The brisk pace she struck for the heart of town, the early nightfall and its shadows hat she hugged wherever the street lights would let her find them, failed to give any sense of security from staring eyes—eyes that stared in envy, in resentment, in brute hunger, which her beauty bred that dared thus show itself alone and with every enhancement of elegance.

Desirous to see nobody, she was none the less aware of being by everybody seen, and cringed miserably within the armor of her unawareness.

The women who envied she could understand and make allowances for the mean creatures she could afford to forget who hated her for the summer ways that she enjoyed, but the men * * * the men, she felt, knew what her errand was * * *

One big store was not yet closed. She passed through the building without pause and on the far side hailed a taxicab—carefully avoiding the car-porter. The worst was over then.

She had only the knowing air of the garage attendant to ignore when he took his tip for showing her to the car which he had ready to be driven out—"Mr. Cruddock" having telephoned.

She had been gone from the old house on the Square less than 20 minutes when she was deftly jockeying an inconspicuous coupe through traffic tangles and heading out of town by way of Broad street and the Old York road.

The clean airs admitted by the barely open windshield were sweet and heady, the ferment of nerves died down as if to the influence of a mild hypnotic.

The dreads passed that all day had haunted her in such questionable shapes, even the dreads inspired by the ambiguous promises of the detective and fostered by her talk with May.

Whatever was to happen, she now knew, she would never go back to Tabor. The life she had lived with him was so utterly unrelated to the life with which today was rich that she looked back on it but vaguely mused, as on the all-remembered course of some dream, not an unhappy dream but nothing real.

As idle as inconceivable any attempt to resurrect those dead days * * *

No: May was right, she must at any cost be free * * * if she were not already * * *

The old rancor was no more than had festered when Tabor was a living obstacle to realization of her desires; June wished him no harm, even hoped he was alive and well and in a way to find happiness to compensate the pain she must cause him.

For she was determined, now; compunctions had too long victimized her, she would make definite plans tonight, with Lance, to win her independence.

Better far to treat one badly than refuse to stir a hand toward salvaging the happiness of two.

Tomorrow she would take the first step * * *

On this decision she rested, immeasurably more content.

Use had accustomed her to the folk who ran the little inn tucked away so remotely in the pleated hills. They were civil, mannerly and discreet.

She didn't doubt they understood, but had long since ceased to be self-conscious with them.

Instructions by telephone had made every preparation; their rooms were pleasant with log fires and further brightened by sprays of holly mixed with the last of the autumn leaves.

June had no more than time enough to lay off her furs and consult a mirror—which advised that her complexion needed no repairing—when her heart answered the call of a motorhorn beneath the windows.

Miraculous, that she should be able to discriminate the tone of that one horn from those of its countless kin!

The waiter who was laying the table for dinner thoughtfully made off, the door he closed immediately reopened, she went with a hushed cry to Lance's arms, all else in life was lost in the consciousness of his embrace * * * his lips and the provocative contrast of cheeks chilled in frosty air * * *

"Oh, my dear," she heard herself murmuring, after a time measureless—"my dear, you mustn't you mustn't——"

"Here!" Lance laughed, gently pulling her from him—"give a chap a chance to get his overcoat off, can't you? This seems an even to come into from a night like this * * * I mustn't what?"

"Stay away from me so long again. It's dangerous, Lance dear, it truly is. You give me too much time to think."

"Do I, though?" He confidently smiled. "Perhaps you're right at that. Lovers should never be thinkers; as a rule the combination's fatal."

"Did you have to stop over in New York so long? When did you get in today? I thought, of course, you'd be back first thing this morning; and when the hours wore on and still you didn't call up, I couldn't understand * * *

"But there!" June cried with a tuneful countenance—"I'm talking just like a wife, aren't I?"

"Going on all accounts, you are. Come here." Lance made himself comfortable before the fire, and drew her down to the arm of his chair.

"Yes; I had to spend more time in New York than I'd hoped for; Les affaires * * * This thing of learning how to be a business man and make enough to live up to you, dear, is cramping my style no end.

"One meant to come down by the midnight train, but one got in with a gang that was going to the Follies, so one stopped over till morning; at which time," the young man shamelessly grinned, "one wasn't feeling any too ambitious about early trains. Is one to flatter oneself that one was missed?"

"So much it hurt, dear." June cuddled her cheek to the side of his head. "Really, I mean it. Leaving a woman in love alone so long ought to be reported to the S. P. C. A."

"What about me?"

"But you were having a good time—you and your business and your gang and your Follies!"

"Not so much that I didn't miss you like fun."

"Did you darling?" June cried and ruled an interlude, after which she had to get up and fix her hair.

"And what else did you do, aside from playing around and pretending to transact business?—whatever that word may mean in your vocabulary. Did you see—anybody? or hear anything——"

"Not a glimpse," Lance declared, "not a word."

Nothing more came immediately from the woman posed before the wall mirror, and he shot a speculative glance at her back.

"Why do you ask? Anything new this end?"

"Nothing definite. The Remington people said today that they might have something to tell me by tonight: but they wouldn't commit themselves."

"The devil they did!" Lance almost scorched his fingers with the match he was holding to an unlighted cigarette. "Funny thing for them to call up to say——"

"I called them—I felt so jumpy this afternoon, I had to know if there was anything to know, Lance * * *"

June returned to stand with hands lightly resting on one of his shoulders. "It doesn't matter what they will have to report—though I only found that out after I'd talked with them—I've made up my mind not to wait any longer."

The man lighted his cigarette with an expenditure of more time and pains than that act so habitual really demanded. "What are you going to do, then?"

"Go some place where they let one do such things quickly—Reno, I suppose—and get a divorce."

The dead match missed the fireplace, and Lance absently bent over to pick it up.

While in that position, "Isn't this a bit sudden?" he commented.

"Is it?" June soberly speculated. "To me it seems more like getting to some place I've been journeying a long time to find, but without quite appreciating where I was going. But now I'm there, Lance * * * I know."

Jubilee's Pardner

A Story of Boyhood Adventure

BY JUDD M. LEWIS

WEDNESDAY, and warm and hammy I let Jubilee down by the rope in his teeth and watched out for someone to think I was a girl with my head poked out of the window, like the other man did, but I guess he was the only sucker that was born with $5 and not any sense. So then I got into my britches and went down to take the pail and go after the cows. The bunch all got there before I got done and we counted our fireworks and they were all there, and then while I was feeding my face Younies and Feeble and Maggie, the girl that got fascinated on her leg so that it wouldn't show, came and asked us if we would go out in Big Creek with them after we had put our cows out. When we said we would they said they would go back to their houses and get some baskets with some eats. And then my mother said to bring their baskets and wait for us at my house and she would put something in the baskets too. She said that she always feels safer when her little boy is playing with nice little girls, because there is not so much danger of him getting hurt if girls are along. And Feeble said when girls are along a fella never gets in a freight car and gets tooken away off to some other town, or never gets buried under a mountain of sand. My mother laughed and said that she was sure we would never do anything like that again, and my ant said she knew we wouldn't either. She said the nice thing about me is that I never do the same fool thing twice, and when she began to talk we started off after the cows.

When we got home and were coming in our yard with the berries and flowers we had got there was some*thing went "Boom!" in our barn, and* when we looked that way smoke began to come out of all the cracks. We all ran and flang the door open and a regular cloud came out, and there was the Last Rag of Tripe with his eyebrows and the front part of his hair burned off and his face and neck was black as a kitchen stove, and he was so scairt he couldn't belier. We took him in our house to see if he was bad hurt, and my mother foamed to his mother and then washed his face, and he wasn't burned hardly any. He said he had been going to play a joke on us and he got a can and opened up all of our fireworks and took the powder out of them and closed them up so we wouldn't notice it. Then he took a piece of fuse and lit one end of it and was going to put the other end in the powder can and skin out, and that's all he knows about it. We went out and looked at our fireworks, and all that is any good is a few dinky little fireworks. His mother took him home and told us his father would tend to his case. A lot of good that will do us. I wish it had been dynamite.

Love's Awakening

The Heart Story of a Woman's Lasting Affections

BY ADELE GARRISON

Princess Olina Resentful

FOR an instant after Princess Olina's ultimatum concerning the flowers I had brought her, I felt a fleeting sympathy with the canaille of the French Revolution. There must have been a certain satisfaction in applying the guillotine to the necks of insolent royalty. Then I crushed down all resentment and steeled myself to deal with the situation she had thrust upon me. She was gowned in a striking but most inappropriately elaborate gown of cream lace and crimson brocade. She was right I knew. Only roses with the glow of the ruby at their hearts should be worn with such a gown, but I had a sudden dismaying vision of the discordant note which that decided color would strike at my carefully planned dinner table.

"But—" I said, "you told me that Mary was going to wear a gold-colored dress."

"Yes, I know," she said impatiently. "But I didn't know then that Mary was going to wear that gown." She swept her hand toward Mary standing before her dressing table, involuntarily smiling at her own lovely reflection as she fastened the corsage which I had handed her. "What difference does it make? Can't I send out for some crimson roses for a corsage?"

"If you will come with me for a moment," I said quietly, "I will show you why I think you will prefer some other gown."

She looked at me resentfully for a second, then nodded.

"Very well," she said, and I preceded her into the living room.

"When you realize that all the other gowns either are variations of this color or blend with it—" I began.

The Princess Is Angered

She threw up her head and looked at me with haughty resentment.

"I did not know," she said coldly, "that you had built this dinner around Mary's gown—Why?"

She shot the question at me with sudden fierce suspicion, and I caught my breath in dismay. She must not guess! I took refuge in evasion.

"Don't you think a more plausible explanation is that Mary chose the gown because it fitted in with the color scheme?" I asked quickly, hoping that my coolly indifferent tone might give her the denial I did not wish to make outright.

The explanation satisfied her. I saw that relievedly as her eyes lost their fierce questioning. She took another look at the table and turned back to me.

"This leaves me no alternative," she said still with hauteur. "I cannot possibly wear the gown. Will I have time to change?"

"Of course," I said heartily. "You really are the guest of honor, you know. We can wait indefinitely for you."

Madge Feels Guilty

She smiled, inscrutably, and I knew that she was thinking of the announcement of her engagement to Noel which the young violinist, under my instruction, had asked her to have announced at this "house-warming" dinner. We had played our cards so carefully that she thought no one but herself, Noel and Harry Underwood to whom Noel had confided, knew of her betrothal. And Princess Georges was equally certain that Dicky and I were Mary's only confidants.

For a second I felt a little guilty at the game we were playing, with our young royal guests as pawns. Then my common sense came to my aid and I told myself that in reality we were doing them both the greatest service possible. If we could show them their own hearts—for I believed that unknown to themselves they had an attraction for each other greater than their respective infatuations for Mary and Noel—we could bring a romantic episode to a close with no bitter memories and no unfortunate fastening of ties which inevitably must later be broken.

"Will you look at my gowns?" Princess Olina's voice cut short my introspection. "It is hard for me to decide which one to wear."

I told myself a little grimly that the rest of us had no such problem, but my response was prompt.

"Why not let the roses decide?" I countered, and later in her room helped her get into an exquisite creation of gold satin with a single strap of pearls against which the corsage of creamy roses with their golden hearts glowed vividly. Her dark beauty should have dwarfed Mary, but I saw with elation that Dicky's young niece was the lovelier of the two. It was a verdict which I saw reflected a few moments later in Noel Veritzen's eyes when he came into the Underwood's living room with his father. With a little feeling of panic I glanced at the boy's father. Had he seen that glance of love and longing and read it aright?

Philip Veritzen's eyes met mine with a look which made me want to turn my head away, for it was distinctly embarrassing in its open admiration. It told me silently that my gown was perfect, and that it suited me. It said more than that, subtly, but for once I did not resent it, because his glance had taken from me the fear with which I had seen Noel's look at Mary. Philip Veritzen had not detected his son's look at Dicky's lovely niece, and I grimly thanked my particular little joss for the concentration of his attention upon me, something which in other circumstances, would have greatly annoyed me.

But it was a danger only skirted. I knew that. Noel was too much in love with Mary and she with him, to be able to wear their masks without occasional slipping. And at any minute the arrogant head of the American dramatic world might discover that his plans for his son's alliance with the daughter of the queen whom he had loved in his stormy youth were not coming to fruition. If we could but avert that moment until the time when—I was sure—Princess Olina herself would break her engagement to Noel, Philip Veritzen's wrath against his son and Mary, while swift, might not be lasting.

It was with tense, poignant anxiety that I went into dinner upon the arm of Philip Veritzen, while Dicky escorted Lillian and Harry, Faith Fairfax, leaving the quartet of young lovers to their own partnership. It was an ordeal which did not lessen, even though the dinner and its service was such that even Philip Veritzen, epicure, patently approved and enjoyed it, and I saw that Noel and Mary shared my nervousness. Neither ate anything except the morsel necessary to feign enjoyment of the dinner, and as the coffee was served, I saw their faces whiten, and guessed that each dreaded imminently the ordeal before them.

Purnell finished serving the coffee and silently melted away. I had instructed him to leave us to ourselves after the placing of the coffee service. Dicky glanced at me and then rose with the easy grace which always invests any action of his.

Introducing Mr. Underwood

"You were invited to a housewarming or rather apartment warming dinner," he said, "but we didn't warn you that you'd have to listen to a little speech making before we released you. It is a speech that I really should make, but my good friend, Mr. Underwood, who loves nothing better than the sound of his own mellifluous voice has begged me to permit him to take my place. Friends, Mr. Underwood."

He sat down, and Harry Underwood arose with a baleful eye fixed upon his friend.

"You can't spell that four syllabled word you just handed out, much less pronounce it, and as for anything the sound of my own voice—ladies and gentlemen, let me tell you that the bird at the head of the table hums himself to sleep because he thinks he has such a lovely singing voice. I might add that the opinion is not shared by the other inmates of his house.

"If I had known," replied Dicky with dignity, catching the cue "that you were going to insult me, I should not have honored you by—"

The Double Betrothal

"Oh, you're going to renege on the proposition now," Mr. Underwood retorted. "I thought that was about what you'd do when you discovered I really was game to call your bluff. Well, now my lad, let me tell you something. You don't get in on this. Your opportunity has passed. I'm going to make this speech unless you bring in ten coppers—it will take that many—to stop me."

The faces of Princess Olina and Prince Georges were a study. Buffoonery such as this at even an informal dinner was beyond them, and somewhat distasteful. But their eyes puzzled, and that was what I wished. I knew Harry Underwood was adroitly planning to make the double betrothal announcement with an abruptness which would keep the two young scions of royalty and Philip Veritzen from guessing it beforehand.

"I assume," went on Mr. Underwood, a bit loftily, "that everyone here is familiar with that great study of Kipling's called Stalky and Company. You all no doubt remember that the master, Prout, was always talking about standing 'in loco parentis' to the boys. It is a happy phrase, a phrase I love. For instance my friend, the Dicky bird stands 'in loco parentis' to a certain lovely girl at this table, as I have been honored with a most exalted lady to the same position. By virtue of that office, my friends I have the honor to announce the betrothals—" his voice was suddenly solemn—"of the Princess Olina to Mr. Noel Veritzen, and of Miss Mary Harrison to Prince Georges."

"No!" The voice, in half stifled protest was that of Princess Olina.

TAKE IT SAFE TO BE HUNGRY!

TODAY, leading medical authorities are constantly advising better care of food—earnestly urging you to adopt scientific refrigeration. For, they have discovered that perishable foods must be kept at a temperature below 50 degrees always. At higher temperatures harmful germs thrive and multiply at an alarming rate. Keep this in mind when you trade in your car

THAT one dealer may offer you a larger allowance than another does not necessarily mean that he is giving you the best deal.

You will buy most advantageously to yourself if you remember these basic facts:

A trade-in transaction is a purchase, not a sale. You are simply applying your present car as a credit against the price of the new car.

Your present car has only one fundamental basis of value: what the dealer can get for it in the used car market. It seems to have different values because competitive dealers are bidding to sell you a new car.

An excessive allowance may mean that you will be paying an excessive price for the new car in comparison with its real value. In other words, the new car may be priced to permit the extra allowance.

Consider first the merits of each new car as compared with its price, including all delivery and finance charges. Then consider the various allowances offered on your present car.

Don't put the cart before the horse.

Boxing Commission Insists That Schmeling Fight Scott

PROMISING ROOKIE

Earle Averill Makes Them Forget Tris

Shades of SPEAKER
THE EXPENSIVE OUTFIELDER OBTAINED BY THE TRIBE FROM SAN FRANCISCO IS MAKING CLEVELAND FANS FORGET THE GREY EAGLE
WHAT A BOY!
HE'LL GET BETTER WITH EXPERIENCE
Earle AVERILL

BY QUIN HALL

THERE may be some important civic questions to be decided in Cleveland Ohio but wherever men gather in the evenings the conversation usually starts off with This fellow Averill and is holled down there securely for a considerable part of the evening

Almost every ball club has at least one rookie who possesses great possibilities The New York Yankees have Sam Byrd Detroit has Alexander and Johnson the St Louis Cardinals have Gilbert and Cleveland has Earl Averill!

Averill is the expensive outfielder purchased from the San Francisco Seals He looks like the prize rookie of 1929 to a lot of fans who take their baseball seriously and his purchase nicked the Indians bankroll for a reported $50 000

Averill is noted chiefly as a hitter and has a record which indicates he is not only good with the willow but that he is consistent He hit 354 in 1928 after socking the apple for marks of 343 in 27 and 318 in 28 He smashed out thirty-seven four ply wallops in San Francisco last year and scored 180 runs

This prize rookie stands five-foot ten weighs 175 pounds has left handed when he comes to the plate and right handed when he throws

The Cleveland fans are already beginning to forget the loss of Tris Speaker the great old Gray Eagle They figure that before the year is over Averill will have done things around the American league which will be worth rehearsing during the long winter evenings when they sit around munching apples and eating pop corn

Averill is only 24 years of age Base runners have already discovered that he has an excellent throwing wing he himself is nimble on the paths

DECREE APPEARS TO END HOPES OF BOUT WITH JACK SHARKEY

Garden Corporation Now Reported To Be Considering Revised Program

BY DAVIS J WALSH

NEW YORK July 3—Before the hicks got through searching each others pockets today they apparently had arranged matters to such purpose that there was nothing left for anybody not even the heavyweight championship fight with which the populace was to be regaled in September There will be no Sharkey Schmeling match this year unless Schmeling changes his mind or the New York boxing commission its attitude and while this undoubtedly will be all right with Joe Cunto the man in the street it isn't the sort of business that could be transacted in somebody's show window

Politics drove the first Tunney Dempsey fight out of New York Personal motives in which all participants are concerned may serve to drive this one much further than out of New York It may be driven out of existence

Bang! Bang!

With the commission insisting that Schmeling must play with Phil Scott and the German vowing that he will fight no fights with which his discountenanced manager Arthur Bulow is concerned the Garden corporation is believed to be dallying with the possibility of a revised program This if put into effect would call for the following

A non title fight in September between Sharkey and Otto Von Lorne in the price range of $2 to $15 This would square Sharkey for the $100 000 contract he holds and while the fight might make absolutely no money for almost everybody concerned it at least would leave the Garden that much ahead of the game

Dempsey's

Next a Dempsey Schmeling fight in Miami this winter provided the former forgets he is a census taker and settles down to figures that can be read without eye strain

Third the two winners to meet for the title late next summer

There had been some talk of the Garden having Bulow a new tricycle or something and thus clearing the way for a Schmeling Sharkey fight in September But this would only square Bulow whereas the boxing commission can't and won't be placated until Phil Scott gets his punch in the nose right in front of everybody

Out of Town

They also were saying that the Garden might take the fight out of town as Richard did with his two episodes of the Tunney Dempsey serial But gambling like this with Garden finances died with Richard and, fortunately so because there is no man now in the organization who looks capable of promoting a big fight even on the home grounds

SPORT STUFF

NOT much doubt about where our all league quiet of roses goes for yesterday's game Corwin, Epworth Senior hurler pitched one of those no hit no run games yesterday against Wesley and those kind of games put you in anybody's Hall of Fame He struck out 11 in this game and did not permit a Wesley player to hit a ball out of the infield Without a doubt it was one of the best games ever pitched here Three men reached first base one by a walk and the others on infield errors

MACKS SOCK SOLONS FOR TWIN WIN WHEN FOXX DRIVES HOMER

Gain Half Game on Yanks, Who Regain Second Place as Browns Lose

NEW YORK July 3 Connie Mack is no dumbbell such a notion today to invite Mark Twain classic stark storming 1 s premature demise For Connie Athletics who were buried Monday following their loss of two games in a row came back yesterday to smack the Washingtons for a trio of games

In doing this the leghorns gained a half game on the Yankees who lost only a single tilt from the Red Sox the Yanks getting a little solace from the fact that while they were whipping the Hub city lads the St Louis Browns were losing to the Detroit Tigers thus allowing the Hoosiers entire cross town second place

The Athletics had an easy time of it in flaying the first place Washington Senators but found Sam Jones a tough nut to crack in the second Ted Sam made his only error in the ninth when he passed up Simmons to get at Foxx who preceded to slam out his fifteenth home run of the season and win a ball game all at 1 o'clock time

The Yankees were forced to score three in the ninth to top the scoring unit at that in the tenth after the Red Sox got hot

St Louis fans were singing the Blues this morning as Detroit running wildly toll them of the Cards sixth straight loss this time to the Pirates Three fast double plays aided the Bucs no little

Chicago kept up its winning streak by an eleven inning win over the Reds The old Chicago spirit was evidenced by several fist fights between fans in the bleachers and near clashes between the players

Giant plans for a fresh drive on the Cubs may were given a set back when the Braves took the earlier half of a twin bill after losing the first Met ott rapped his twenty third homer of the season in the last game

SIMPSON WITHDRAWS FROM DENVER MEET

Recurrence of Leg Injury Causes State Flash To Go Out

DENVER Colo July 3—The national track and field champion ships that get under way here today will be minus the services of George Simpson renowned Ohio State sprint ace for the Ohio dash pulled a tendon in his leg yesterday during a workout

Simpson suffered the same misfortune last year at the final Olympic tryouts at Cambridge

Practically all the athletes of the country with an outstanding performance during the year to their credit are gathered here and ready for the nineteen gun Clash Hayes, Eddie Tolan and Frank Wykoff who with Simpson make up the fastest quartet of dashmen in these United States are set for an assault on the century record

The sprints the pole vault the mile the hurdles and the shot put and discus throw all promise stirring competition

SEWER GAS BLAST

Boys, Injured, Learn They Shouldn't Drop Matches Through Manhole

COLUMBUS, July 3—Sitting on the lid of a manhole and dropping lighted matches through an opening, proved to be a game little boys should not indulge in.

Mickey Yeager today is in a serious condition from burns about the face and body. His companion, Patrick Weldon, Jr., 3, suffered lesser burns as the result of their prank, which caused an explosion of sewer gas.

Prompt aid by Patrick Weldon, Sr., and an unidentified passerby, attracted by the report of the explosion, saved the boys from probable fatal injuries.

THE most popular covering these days is the bareskin, as the hat-less, neck-less, sleeve-less, back-less and leg-less fashions reign. Jin feels quite overdressed in his coat of fur as he looks over Rosalie's suntan outfit, which consists principally of a knitted Jacquard sweater and matching cardigan. The sweater is sunbacked and sleeveless. Underneath she wears a backless bib-and-trunks combination with shoulder straps which cross in the back. A pair of short sox and slippers completes the outfit. At night one may even wear a sunbacked night gown, designed so that those who are devotees of the synthetic sunshine obtained via the X-ray machine may be properly dressed to receive their daily coat of tan.

Price of Lemons Jumps to New High Mark in Marion

"What price lemonade?" That was the question this morning when lemons hit a new high mark of 60 cents a dozen. A nickel for the yellow fruit is the highest price the customer has been asked to pay this year.

A few short days ago, lemons could be bought at 37 cents a dozen. From this quotation they jumped to 39, then to 45, and now to 60 cents a dozen. There are a few selling at three for a dime, but these are not selects.

New cabbage, this year's crop, is selling at six cents a pound. This will be saleable for some time, and usually enjoys a fairly good market here, grocers say.

A few honey dew melons could be bought for 30 cents this morning, but most markets gave higher quotations, ranging to 45 cents a melon. Cantaloupes continue to sell between 15 and 30 cents each.

Yellow transparent apples, which opened here two weeks ago at two pounds for 27 cents, were down a cent a pound this morning, selling at two pounds for 25 cents. Texas onions were available this morning at three pounds for 25 cents.

FILES PETITION

Kentucky Bank Asks Court To Forbid Waste of Timber

MT. GILEAD, July 3—A petition has been filed in the common pleas court by The Federal Land Bank, of Louisville, Ky., against Earl C. Levering in an effort to keep from destroying timber on the farm of John S. Mellott.

The corporation states in its petition that Jan. 14, 1921 John S. Mellott together with his wife, Ina Mellott, executed and delivered to it their promissory note for $2,400 and delivered to the plaintiff their mortgage deed on 80 acres of land in Franklin township.

Earl Levering who is successor to the land conveyed the premises to Clyde Houle reserving the timber on the premises to himself which the plaintiff states was a security to them for their said loan.

The defendant after keeping this timber was to use only what was necessary for farm use. The plaintiff states that the timber which is supposed to be saved by Levering is being cut and sold.

The plaintiff asks that the court forbid Levering from wasting any more of the timber.

Today's Review of Yesterday's Grain

CHICAGO, July 3 — Sensational news from the Northwest, bullish private crop reports and inflications that Europe is recognizing crop damage in North America gave the local wheat market a strong tone yesterday and prices ruled sharply higher despite local opposition, heavy profit taking and a large volume of hedging sales.

Coarse grains and rye were higher with wheat and the bullish private estimate of this season's yield. Trade in these cereals, however, continued light.

Closing prices were at moderate recessions from the high, but the major part of the day's general advance was maintained. Wheat closed with net gains of 1⅝@2c. Corn was ⅝@¾c higher; oats ⅜@½c up; and rye 1¼@1½c higher. Winnipeg wheat futures closed 4½@5c higher than Saturday, while Liverpool was 3⅞@4⅝d higher for the day.

Prices Start Strong

Local prices advanced sharply at the outset on the continued sensational reports from the domestic and Canadian spring wheat territory, and the bullish foreign news. Liverpool's strong advance was ascribed to the unfavorable reports from the United States and Canada and strength at Argentine markets with a report of labor troubles in Rosario.

The renewal of speculative interest abroad and a decidely better tone to export cables with a good demand for Canadian and American wheats and sales of 1,250,000 bu. confirmed were construed as serious acceptance by the foreign trade of North American crop damage reports.

Private reports issued at 10 o'clock were in line with expectations, indicating by their average a winter yield of 601,000,000 bu. and a spring crop of 273,000,000 bu. or a total crop of 855,000,000 bu. compared with last year's harvest of 902,750,000 bu.

Two estimates of the Canadian yield were 365,000 bu. and 392,000,000 bu. The only favorable crop news was from abroad with figures by Broomhall indicating a crop of 148,000,000 bu. compared with 122,640,000 bu. a year ago for France. These were largely offset by the better foreign demand.

CURL BUYS MILL

Local Man Now Owner of Business at Cardington

Johnson J. Curl, manager of the Marion Grain & Supply Co., has purchased the Ohio Roller Mills, located at Cardington. Although plans for the operation of the mill have not been completed, it will be opened Saturday for the first time in several months.

Mr. Curl's purchase includes a flour mill, an elevator and two warehouses. It was purchased at a private sale from W. W. Vaughan, receiver for the C. E. Linn & Co., former operators of the mill. Efforts to sell the mill at a receiver's auction were unsuccessful when the court refused to confirm a bid of $8,200.
